

2018 Guide to Master's Course Entrance Examinations

Department of Architecture, Graduate School of Engineering, The University of Tokyo

1. Eligibility

In order to apply for the entrance examination, prospective students must meet the requirements set by the Graduate School of Engineering. Refer to Guidelines for Applicants to the 2018 Master's Program Graduate School of Engineering, the University of Tokyo for details.

http://www.t.u-tokyo.ac.jp/soee/admission/general_guideline.html

There are no restrictions regarding past fields of specialization (majors/degrees) or year(s) when qualifications (degrees) were attained. Master's Course entrance examinations are conducted once a year.

2. Supervising Professors and Application Forms

Students enrolled in the Graduate School pursue their research under a supervising professor. Therefore, applicants must select a supervising professor with whom they wish to work with from the list of faculty members. Applicants may apply for up to three faculty members of their choice. All applicants must write the name of their first choice faculty member on Department of Architecture application form Sheet 1B. It is not mandatory to include a second and/or third choice of supervising professor.

On Sheet 1A (Future Research Plan), write about your research topic and research plan and describe what you wish to accomplish in your graduate studies. Please send Sheets 1A, 1B, and 1C together with the other application documents from the Graduate School of Engineering.

3. Number of Accepted Students and Admission Dates & Deadlines

The Department of Architecture Master's Course will accept 32 students in academic year 2018*. The number of students admitted to each professor is restricted in order to avoid unbalanced research environments within the department. Normally, admitted students enter graduate school in April. Students who complete undergraduate courses by the end of September may enter the graduate school in September, as stated in Graduate School Admission Information.

*The Japanese academic year starts on April 1 and ends on March 31.

4. Examinations

Applicants will be evaluated based on written and oral entrance examinations as described below.

(A) Written examination

Subject	Duration of test	Content of Examination
